EMPOWERING WOMEN IN AGRI BUSINESS

In agribusinesses, women are catalysts for change, driving innovation and sustainability from farm to fork. Their roles encompass diverse areas, including farming, supply chain management, value addition, and marketing. Despite facing challenges such as limited access to resources and gender bias, women are reshaping the agribusiness landscape through resilience and determination. From cultivating crops to managing post-harvest processes, women are vital contributors to agricultural production. They leverage technology and best practices to enhance productivity and minimize waste, ensuring a steady supply of high-quality produce. Additionally, women entrepreneurs are venturing into value addition and food manufacturing, adding value to raw agricultural products and creating employment opportunities in rural areas.
